Death Calls Dr. Rufus H. Wilkinson

END WAS NOT UNEXPECTED

Though Children Were Summoned, His Strength Did Not Fail Until Monday Night. Sketch of His Life and Work.

Rufus H. Wilkinson, D. D., died at 7 o'clock yesterday morning at the family home, number 805 North Second avenue. Death was not unexpected and two children who reside in the east having been notified of his rapid decline reached here the day before, so that all his children save one, were at his bedside. He was 74 years old last Wednesday and death followed the complications of age rather than the inroads of any specific disease. He caught a severe cold while visiting in Colorado last summer, resulting in a bronchial condition that was never fully cleared up, so that the lungs failed in their duty of purifying the blood, gradually weakening his system, though in point of physical strength he retained a large measure of it almost until the end. Though the shadow of death was already upon him, so late as Monday night he was able to meet with the family at the evening meal.

The funeral will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the family home, 805 North Second avenue, and interment will be made in the Greenwood cemetery. It will be attended by the Grand Army as deceased was chaplain of John W. Owens post of this city. Dr. J. A. Gelsinger of Los Angeles, formerly pastor of the First M. E. church of this city, and a warm personal friend of Dr. Wilkinson, will arrive on this morning's train and with Rev. Robert S. Fisher, the present pastor of the Phoenix church, will officiate at the funeral. All the children of the deceased will be present. It is expected, as the eldest daughter is expected to arrive this morning also, from her home in Los Angeles. Friends of the family who desire to attend the funeral, will be made welcome.

Dr. Wilkinson was born in Brookville, Indiana, and was graduated from DePauw university, having the life of a minister in view and during his student days performing at times the duties of a circuit rider. It was during this period that the nation was plunged into civil war and, enlisting under the first ninety days call to arms, he went to the front in the command of Lew Wallace who later earned the rank of general and became notable also in the world of literature.

The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on Mr. Wilkinson at a later date by DePauw university. During the war he was married to a fellow student of the institution, did not long survive in the life journey but left a daughter, Martha, who was taken by an aunt to raise and who adopted her name. She is now known as Miss Martha Wright and her home is in Los Angeles. She is expected here this morning responsive to a telegram announcing her father's death.

Concluding his studies the young minister joined the Rock River, Illinois, conference of the Methodist Episcopal church and served that field of Methodism through his entire active career as a minister of the gospel, or until he was superannuated about 1901. He became of course one of the best known preachers in the conference and filled many charges, most of them being in the near vicinity of Chicago. Latterly he lived in Evanston and preached in that city and Chicago more or less until he came to Phoenix to make his home, about four years ago.

Forty-three years ago he was married in St. Charles, Ill., to Adelia Quackenbush by whom he had seven children, of whom six are living. In the order of their age their names and residences are as follows: Dr. W. W. Wilkinson, H. B. Wilkinson and Miss Nellie Wilkinson, all of Phoenix; Mrs. Grace Bennett of York, Neb.; R. H. Wilkinson, Jr., of Youngstown, Ohio; and F. M. Wilkinson who is engaged in farming fourteen miles northwest of Phoenix.

R. H. Wilkinson, Jr., is manager of a large steel plant in Youngstown, Ohio, and being notified of his father's probably fatal illness he started west at once, being joined enroute by his sister, Mrs. Bennett. Miss Nellie Wilkinson is a teacher in the Phoenix high school and resided with her father and mother on Second avenue. Dr. Wilkinson is a well known local practitioner, and H. B. Wilkinson as a lawyer and banker is well known in local business and professional circles.

Five children of the deceased are married, and in each instance their father has officiated at the altar. Six grandchildren also survive. A son with their parents and their bereaved grandmother. Last Wednesday night was the last occasion when any considerable number of relatives assembled, previous to yesterday, it being the birthday anniversary of Rev. Mr. Wilkinson, celebrated by a family party at the home of H. B. Wilkinson, 550 North Central avenue.

The life of the deceased has been one of noble and self sacrificing manhood, devoted to his best conception of duty to his God, his country and his family. His career was a long and honorable one beginning in a generation that saw the most stirring times in the nation's history and ending during the period of its greatest achievement. In the hour of his country's peril he offered his services and his life if it were needed and since the restoration of peace, in accord with the doctrines of his Christian faith he has upheld the right with word and deed, and with fraternal charity has extended the olive branch to those who with the same firm conviction opposed him in the days of old.

As a minister of the gospel he has been faithful to his cause and has been highly honored in the circles of his denomination. As a citizen he maintained a high and lofty purpose and an unusual interest in all matters of civic betterment, to the end of his career. Though coming to Phoenix at three score years and ten he has taken a lively concern in all matters of civic betterment, and though the days of his activity were practically at an end he has been ready on all proper occasions to do his part. Quite frequently since his residence here, he has appeared in the local pulpits and on public platforms and was known to a large number of the better class of citizens and was universally respected.

He was a member of the Masonic order though he has not been active in the work of the society for some years. Also he was affiliated with the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution and just a year ago attended its annual banquet.

PEACEFUL SONS OF WARLIKE ANCESTORS

Discussed Patriotism, Soap and Sweet-breads at Country Club Last Night.

The fifteenth annual banquet of the Arizona Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, was held last night at the Country club. About forty members and their ladies were present and the occasion was a delightful one notwithstanding the absence of several who had been expected, among them three members who had been assigned to the speaking list. These were Bishop J. W. Atwood, Ernest A. Haggett and Moses B. Hazeltine.

The banquet was prepared by the Country club chef and was of course a delectable meal. At its conclusion the president, Dr. Francis E. Shine of Bisbee, assumed the role of toastmaster and called upon Attorney General John B. Wright to address the diners on a subject of his own choosing. For that matter all the speakers were so commissioned, so none could find fault with his subject.

Mr. Wright announced his subject as "Wise and Otherwise" and took his text from a letter written by Macaulay to a friend on the subject of democratic government. The letter predicted the improbability of its success, especially in the populous nations of the old world. Mr. Wright took issue with the notable writer at various points and pointed to American history in defense of his arguments. Also he described at some length the differences between conditions in this country and in European countries, which have some warrant for the great Englishman's opinions.

Dr. Mark Rodgers of Tucson was the second speaker and chose for his subject "The Medical Profession During the Revolutionary War." There was much of a humorous nature in the doctor's talk, but also a great deal of an informative character that was told in a serious vein. There were contrasts of conditions prevailing then and now and likewise contrasts between the knowledge of the medical men of those days and the present as well as some mention of the handicaps of the doctors of the earlier days.

W. H. Seabury of Phoenix delivered a very patriotic address on the desirability of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution as well as other patriotic societies. He spoke of their effect on the public mind, especially on the rising generation, of their work in the inculcation of patriotic sentiments, etc.

That exhausted the announced speaking list, by reason of the absence of three of the expected talkers, but as the evening was yet early the president called for volunteers, intimating that Governor Sloan could discharge such a duty most capably. Hon. Isaac T. Stoddard relieved the situation a little by securing the floor and announcing that he knew Governor Sloan would consent to speak, but that he would like to have a few minutes in which to concentrate his ideas. To that end Mr. Stoddard was willing to occupy a few minutes in general discourse while the governor was preparing. Mr. Stoddard launched a defense of the governor, whom he thought had been badly treated by being referred to as a volunteer when it was well known that he had attended all the banquets of the society and on each occasion had favored it with a speech. Mr. Stoddard thought the governor was entitled to the rank of a regular. He continued some minutes in a humorous vein, until he thought the governor had fully prepared himself, then yielded the floor. Governor Sloan then delivered a very entertaining address of a general nature, drawing his inspiration from the preceding speakers and enlarging on the ideas their remarks had suggested to his mind.

The dinner menu was as follows: Grape Fruit Aspic, Cream of Celery Soup, Salted Nuts, Baby Pickles, Sweetbreads in Raitmaucis, Roast Turkey, New Potatoes, French Peas, Cranberry Jelly, Waldorf Salad, Roquefort Cheese, Toasted Crackers, Frozen Eggnog, Country Club Cake, Coffee Clear, Bent Water Crackers. The tables and club room were nicely decorated with the national colors and the colors of the society—buff, white and blue.

The society will hold a business meeting this morning at 10 o'clock in the office of C. F. Leonard, county recorder, for the election of officers. The reception committee previously appointed, though some of whom were necessarily absent, was composed of the following named gentlemen: Frederick W. Perkins, H. B. Wilkinson, John

The present officers of the society are: President, Dr. Francis E. Shine; vice president, Howard S. Reed; treasurer, Lloyd B. Christy; secretary, Clay F. Leonard; registrar, Prosper P. Parlier; chaplain, Rev. J. W. Atwood; historian, Charles A. Van der Veer. Board of Managers—R. E. Sloan, H. B. Wilkinson, Isaac T. Stoddard. Committee on Arrangement—Isaac T. Stoddard, Lloyd B. Christy, Howard S. Reed.
